PREFACE.

ALTHOUGH full justice has already been done to the text of the Evangeliarium Hierosolymitanum—the Palestinian Syriac Lectionary of the Gospels in the Library of the Vatican—by Count Miniscalchi Erizzo and by Dr. Paul de Lagarde, we think that the text of the two Sinai manuscripts also merits attention, both as supplementing that of the Vatican one, and as presenting some remarkable features of its own. These MSS., moreover, lie in a place so difficult of access, that it seemed almost a duty to give scholars the opportunity of comparing their several peculiarities, both of spelling and of diction, with those of their sister manuscript.

The printing of this work, with its numerous reference-letters, has been a tedious business, and has lasted over five years. During that period I have received such substantial assistance from my twin sister, Mrs. Margaret D. Gibson, that it is only fair to associate her name with mine on the title-page. In the spring of 1897 she revisited Sinai with me, and there revised the proofs of Codex B with the original, whilst I did the same to those of Codex C. I am also indebted to the Rev. Professor Nestle of Ulm (now of Maulbronn) for his careful reading of my proof-sheets, and for many valuable suggestions. He has been especially attentive to the collation from Codex A.

I have to thank Mr. J. F. Stenning, of Magdalen College, Oxford, for photographing a few pages of Codex B in 1894; and lastly, I have to thank the printers for their skill and patience in the execution of a very troublesome work.

INTRODUCTION.

The "Evangeliarium Hierosolymitanum" of the Vatican.

It is now nearly 140 years since the Maronites Stephen Evodius and Joseph Simon Assemani, in their Catalogue of the Syriac manuscripts in the Vatican Library, devoted 33 folio pages to the description of an ancient vellum codex (No. xix.) of 196 leaves, written in the Palestinian Syriac character, in two columns, and forming a Lectionary of the Gospels arranged in portions to be read throughout the year. "It is a unique specimen of its kind," they said, "and its inestimable value is increased by the fact of its containing the story of the woman taken in adultery (for the Feast of St. Pelagia), John vii. 53—viii. 11."

An inscription in the MS. copied by Assemani, half of which is now lost, says that it was written by the Presbyter Elias of Abbud, in the Monastery of the Abbot Moses in the city of Antioch (of the Arabs),[1] in the year 1341 of Alexander = A.D. 1030. It was bequeathed by him, along with other MSS., to a monastery which he built, that of Mar Elias in Kaukab, on the condition that it should never be bought nor sold. There is no record of how it was brought to the Vatican Library.

It was examined by Adler, when he visited Rome in 1781, and was described by him in his book Novi Testamenti versiones Syriacae Simplex, Philoxeniana et Hierosolymitana, published in 1789.

Adler says (p. 157) "Superest, ut usum et in re critica in primis valorem huius versionis ostendam, qui sane, me judice, tantus est, ut naevi omnes laudem eius detractare vix queant, et nesciam, an ullus probatissimorum codicum graecorum palmam ei praeripiat."

He observed that some of its readings agree with quotations in the works of Origen, Chrysostom, and others of the Early Fathers; and that the text which comes nearest it is that of the Codex Vaticanus (p. 201).

[1] Perhaps near Jerusalem.

Seventy-five years later (1864) Cardinal Angelus Maius and the Maronite Sahwan encouraged Count Miniscalchi-Erizzo to publish a very sumptuous edition of the text, with a Latin translation, in which he followed, as far as possible, the Vulgate; a useful glossary of Palestinian Syriac words; and an introduction, in which he brought forward some cogent arguments to prove that the dialect of this codex was the vernacular of Palestine in the time of our Lord, and therefore the language spoken by Him. He considered that it represents the form of Aramaic which was brought from Chaldæa by the returning Hebrew exiles in the time of Nehemiah, and which became mingled to a great extent with Hebrew words. He noticed its striking similarity to the language of the Targums and to that of the Babylonian Talmud, the chief difference between it and them being that it is written in a character nearly approaching to Estrangelo Syriac, whilst they are in Hebrew letters. So highly did Miniscalchi exalt his subject, that he considered this version to be older than either the Peshiṭta or the Curetonian, and to approach very nearly to the original of St. Matthew's Gospel.[1] There is some force in his argument, that if it was written for the benefit of Christian Jews who still spoke the language of the Targums in their native land, its origin cannot be later than the second century. There would have been no need, he says, for the production of this version after the Peshiṭta had become the Authorized Version of the Syriac Church. Miniscalchi perhaps gives too little weight to the fact that the Peshiṭta was, in the early centuries, accepted by the Monophysite section of that Church, whilst this was the Lectionary of the Malkites. It agrees in its division of Lessons with the Arabic Lectionary now in use amongst the latter, there being only some slight variations. There can be no doubt, however, as to the value of this version as a perfectly independent witness to the text of the Gospels.

Dr. Nöldeke complains that Miniscalchi's translation does not meet the wants of students, because the Latin language is incapable of giving full expression to the meaning of the Syriac. It is a matter of regret that it has not yet been rendered into Greek.[2]

Other MSS. in Palestinian Syriac.

For upwards of a century the Palestinian dialect of Syriac was represented by this solitary Codex. But in 1875 Dr. Land of Leyden published some fragments of the Gospels and of the Psalms, with portions of hymns, from two of the Nitrian MSS. in the British Museum (Add. 14664 and Add. 14450), and a number of fragments, 129 in number, brought by Tischendorf to the Imperial Library of St. Petersburg after his second and third journeys to the East. These consist of portions of the Gospels and of the Acts; and from the Old

Testament, of Deuteronomy, Job, the Psalms, Proverbs, and Isaiah, also from the Acts of St. Philemon, the homilies of St. John Chrysostom, and some hymns. Many of the St. Petersburg fragments are palimpsest, and were deciphered with difficulty, the upper writing being in the Georgian or Iberian language.

In 1890 Dr. Rendel Harris published some verses from Galatians, found on a vellum leaf in the Convent Library on Mount Sinai. And in 1891 five palimpsest leaves were sent to the Bodleian Library, Oxford, from Egypt, by the late Rev. Greville J. Chester. They contain some verses from the Book of Numbers, from Colossians, 1 Thessalonians, 2 Timothy, and Titus, and were published by the Rev. G. H. Gwilliam in 1893, in Anecdota Oxoniensia.

The Vatican Lectionary was again very carefully edited by Dr. Paul de Lagarde, who paid three visits to Rome (1890—91) for the purpose of collating it. It was published in Bibliotheca Syriaca in 1892, after his death. We cannot but regret deeply that this great scholar should have passed away just before two other MSS. of the same Lectionary, and many fresh specimens of the same dialect were brought to light.

Discovery of the Two Sinai Codices.

In February 1892, whilst my sister, Mrs. James Y. Gibson, and I were examining and photographing some of the treasures in the Convent of St. Catherine, on Mount Sinai, the Librarian, Father Galakteon, called my attention to a beautiful Codex whose value he was very desirous of knowing. He kept it apart from the others, wrapped in a cotton handkerchief, although it had come out of the same box as the now famous Palimpsest of the Syriac Gospels, which was then occupying my exclusive attention. He asked me to photograph a few pages, and take them to Europe, so that I might be able to give him an account of what the manuscript really was. It was more than a week before I could accede to his request, being anxious to obtain a complete copy of the Palimpsest. I then photographed the first two and the last two pages. Having done so, the idea occurred to me that it would be pleasanter if I were able to read what I intended to submit to the judgment of Cambridge scholars. So, with the help of Dr. Euting's table of Semitic alphabets, I managed to decipher a good deal, and was delighted beyond measure when I found it was Syriac, although differing from the literary language both in spelling and in much of its vocabulary. Galakteon was equally delighted when I was able to tell him that it began with the first chapter of St. John's Gospel, and ended with the story of Herodias as told by St. Mark; also that its date was 6612 from the time of Adam.

After our return home we developed my four photographs, and I was told successively by Dr. Rendel Harris, Professor Bevan, and Professor Robertson Smith that I had made a discovery, and that the Vatican Codex described by Assemanus and by Adler could no longer be considered unique.[1] When I returned to Sinai in the following spring (1893) I resolved that while Professor Bensly, Dr. Rendel Harris, and Mr. Burkitt should be engaged in copying the text of the Syriac Gospels from the Palimpsest, I would devote myself to the much easier task of collating the Palestinian Lectionary on the recently published text of Paul de Lagarde. But on the very first day of our arrival I found that my work was to be doubled; for amongst the manuscripts which were produced by Father Galakteon from the same box as the Palimpsest, Dr. Rendel Harris discovered another Palestinian Syriac Lectionary, and taxed me with not having said that there were two copies. The second one is written in a very different hand, and I feel almost certain that it was not shown to me in 1892.

It was necessary to give to each a distinctive title, so I named them according to the order of the dates which they bear, and of the date of their discovery; the Vatican Codex (A.D. 1030) being Codex A, the Sinai one discovered in 1892 (A.D. 1104[2]) being Codex B, and that discovered in 1893 by Dr. Rendel Harris (A.D. 1118[2]) being Codex C; and as Codex A has been already twice edited, I decided to give the text of B, with the variants of A and C in parallel columns. Both the Sinai manuscripts are complete in themselves, so that none of the stray leaves of Palestinian Syriac scattered about the Convent library can be attributed to either of them. Both are vellum, the writing being in two columns, and both are in good bindings of wood covered with leather.

Description of the Codices.

Codex B has 156 leaves, measuring 24 cm. by 18, and having 24 lines in each column. The writing, which is on the line, is distinct, upright, and rather stiff. The first leaf is a fly-leaf, scribbled over with Syriac and Arabic rubrics; folium 152 is the same; ff. 153, 154, 155, and 156 are leaves from another Palestinian Syriac Lectionary, of which two more leaves can be seen in the cover at the beginning and the end of the book. The quires contain eight leaves each, and are numbered with Syriac letters, of which the last is ܟ. Vertical lines have been ruled for the columns. Folium 2 has a corner damaged. It has been

[1] The discovery of this manuscript, and also the photographs, are, through an unaccountable mistake, attributed by Dr. Schwally, in his Idioticon des Christlich Palästinischen Aramäisch, to the late Professor Bensly, whose visit to Sinai occurred a year after the events I have narrated, and who, so far as I know, never read any part of the two Sinai Lectionaries.

[2] I have to express my regret for not having given these dates quite accurately in my Catalogue of the Syriac MSS. on Mount Sinai (Studia Sinaitica, No. I). The mistake probably arose from a dispute which I had with Father Galakteon about the date of the Creation, a point on which he averred that the Eastern Church disagrees with the Western.

repaired by a vellum patch, on either side of which the lost text has been restored. This begins on the recto with ܟܠܐ ܒܗ ܐܬܥܒܕ (John i. 3), and ends with ܡܫܬܠܚ ܡܢ in v. 6. On the verso it begins with ܠܟܠ ܒܪܢܫ ܕܐܬܝܐ ܠܥܠܡܐ (John i. 9), and ends with ܕܒܢܝܢ ܠܐܠܗܐ in v. 12. The omission of a clause in verse 3, καὶ χωρὶς αὐτοῦ ἐγένετο οὐδὲ ἕν, is thus easily accounted for.

Codex C has 156 leaves, measuring 22 cm. by 16, with 22 to 24 lines in each column. The writing is on the line, and though upright is flowing, and sometimes a little careless. The first two leaves are scribbled over with Arabic rubrics. The last two (or possibly three) are in Estrangelo Syriac of the seventh or eighth century, and are about the praise of our Lord, of the Virgin Mary, and of various saints. There are vertical lines ruled for the columns. Its rubrics, especially at the beginning, are short and meagre compared with those of Codex B. The leaves of the text are divided into 19 quires, each containing 8 leaves, with the exception of the first, which has 14, the fourth, which has 6, and the nineteenth, which has 3. The last leaf contains a lesson from Luke iii. 23—38, the colophon, containing the date, being on the leaf preceding it.

Both manuscripts possess a distinct advantage over the Vatican one, in that, so far as the Gospel text is concerned, they have not been tampered with by a later hand. There are a few insertions between the lines of earlier writing in the rubrics of Codex B, made evidently with a different kind of pen and of ink, and less carefully; but the "puncta diacritica et alias particulas, praepositiones, ac verba," which were added to Codex A "sine ullo discrimine" by a "barbara et inscia manus,"[1] are happily absent from B and C.

It will readily be perceived that both the spelling and the grammatical forms used in the two Sinai codices fully justify the description given by Miniscalchi-Erizzo of those which distinguish the Palestinian Syriac dialect: "Abundantia quiescentium, scriptio plena nuncupata, quae semper occurrit, et orthographia inconstans, et irregularis, maximae antiquitatis indubium argumentum praebent."[2] And again: "Textus autem attenta lectione et Glossarii studio palam fiet, nostri Codicis linguam esse asperam, incomptam, contractionum et pleonasmûm amicam, litteras distinctas confundentem, elegantiae nesciam; sed robustam, sensus tenacissimam, valde perspicuam, ab ambiguitate penitus alienum, rustica vero quadam, et antiqua simplicitate ac venustate praeditam."[3]

Both the Sinai Codices show a frequent use of the phonetic yod after a consonant, which was probably pronounced with Rebaṣa or Ḥebaṣa. This is especially noticeable in the expression ܠܟܠܝܠ and in the demonstrative pronouns ܕܝܢ, ܗܕܝܢ, where Codex A has ܠܟܠܠ, ܕܢ, ܗܕܢ; and in the third person singular masculine of the preterite, and the noun agent of verbs, e.g. ܐܝܠܐ, ܡܟܝܒ, where Codex A has ܐܘܠܐ, ܡܟܒ. But in this they are not consistent; for sometimes it is A that shows the yod, whilst B and C are without it.

The inverted letter ܦ̈ with two dots is invariably used in A and B to represent π in loan words from the Greek, especially in proper names, such as ܦ̈ܝܠܛܘܣ. C has occasionally this ܦ̈, but more frequently replaces it by beth, as ܒܝܠܛܘܣ, ܒܛܪܘܣ; and occasionally the mistake of using ܦ̈ instead of ܒ causes grotesque forms in both B and C; for instance, ܕܗܘܐ ܒܥܘܦ̈ܗ ܕܐܦ̈ܘܗܝ, John i. 18, in Codex B.

In the Carshuni of the rubrics Professor Robertson Smith, while studying one of my photographs, pointed out to me that the Arabic خ is represented by a Syriac ܟ with two dots. As the Syriac letter ܚ appears to me to be the equivalent of the Arabic خ, I have adopted it instead of ܟ̈ for Carshuni words. An example of this will be found in the Preface to Codex A, page 1, line 9, in the word ܡܚܣܢܝܢ, which De Lagarde edited ܟ̈ܡܣܢܝܢ. I trust I have thereby made the meaning of these somewhat barbarous rubrics less obscure. This remark does not in the least apply to the Syriac text.

Codices B and C contain some portions of the Gospels which are not in Codex A. These are S. Matthew v. 33*b*—41; vi. 24*b*—34; viii. 14—20*a*; xxii. 1; and S. Luke ii. 22*a*; iii. 23—38; xviii. 8*b*, 9; xix. 29—48. One lesson, S. Matt. xvii. 14—23, is found in A and C, but not in B.

Many portions are absent from B and C which we have in A. These are S. Matt. viii. 23—27; xiii. 44—54*a*; xv. 21—28; xvii. 10—13; xxiii. 13—39; xxviii. 16—20; S. Mark xii. 28—37; S. Luke i. 50, 53—55; viii. 9—15, 26; x. 1—12; xi. 29—33; xxii. 39; S. John viii. 1—11.

The lessons in all three codices follow the same order till the end of Lesson CLII. After that the divergence is considerable.

The Sinai Codices contain two remarkable readings, the full significance of which was first observed by Dr. Nestle. Both have ܡܬܒܣܡܝܢ for ܡܬܒܣܪܝܢ in Matt. xi. 5. Here the difference of a single letter gives the sense of οἱ πτωχοὶ εὐφραίνονται instead of οἱ πτωχοὶ εὐαγγελίζονται, a very natural result of their acceptance of our Lord's teaching (p. 275).

C alone exhibits what may possibly have been the second limb of an antithetical Logion, or saying of Jesus. In Matt. xii. 36, instead of the usual λέγω δὲ ὑμῖν ὅτι πᾶν ῥῆμα ἀργὸν ὃ λαλήσουσιν οἱ ἄνθρωποι, ἀποδώσουσιν περὶ αὐτοῦ λόγον ἐν ἡμέρᾳ κρίσεως, C has λέγω δὲ ὑμῖν ὅτι πᾶν ῥῆμα καλὸν ὃ οὐ λαλήσουσιν, κ.τ.λ. (pp. 78, 79).

The view held by Dr. Rendel Harris, that this once constituted the limb of a Logion, receives support from the fact that there is an undoubted antithesis in the sequence: ἐκ γὰρ τῶν λόγων σου δικαιωθήσῃ, καὶ ἐκ τῶν λόγων σου καταδικασθήσῃ.

I have been somewhat puzzled to account for the presence of a colophon after John viii. 2. Dr. Rendel Harris has supplied me with the following ingenious hypothesis: that the section de adultera, John vii. 53—viii. 11, was at one time appended to St. John's Gospel after the final colophon, and that in the Greek or Syriac MS. from which the lessons of the Palestinian Lectionary were taken, the section was removed to the place (between chap. vii. and chap. viii.) which it now usually occupies; but that this being done by scribes who were not highly endowed with intelligence, the colophon was transported with it. The section must, in this instance, have comprised only John viii. 2—11, which is present in codex A, but wanting in B and C (see page 60).

The Dialect.

The fact of these Lectionaries having been written at so late a period points to the conclusion that about the beginning of the twelfth century a Malkite community existed in the vicinity of Mount Sinai—perhaps in the Convent of St. Catherine itself—and that they were in the habit of using the Palestinian Syriac language in their church services. At the same time it is evident that Arabic was the language of their everyday life; else why should the rubrics be in Karshuni? Religious communities, especially when they are in the midst of a people hostile to their faith, are apt to cling tenaciously to the use of the dead language of their fathers. We have an instance of this in the case of the Coptic Church of Egypt; and we know the supreme place which the Church of Rome still gives to Latin. These Lectionaries, therefore, throw but scant light on the question of when Palestinian Syriac ceased to be a spoken language; and we shall be agreeably surprised if they do anything to dissipate the darkness which enshrouds the origin of the version of the Gospels which they represent. I have already quoted the opinion of Miniscalchi-Erizzo with regard to the antiquity of that origin, an opinion which is not shared by Dr. Nöldeke, who does not consider it to be earlier than A.D. 300, possibly later. Even if it be proved that it represents the Galilean dialect of Syriac which was probably spoken by our Lord, and which provoked the retort of the maid-servant to St. Peter,[1] "Thy speech bewrayeth thee," this is not conclusive of its antiquity; for it has survived, in a very corrupt form, down to our own day in several

[1] Dr. Nöldeke does not concur in this view, because he considers that the texts which we possess in this dialect probably had their origin in Judaea, rather than in Galilee, and he detects a certain stiffness of locution which points to the translation having been made when the dialect was no longer in common use. "In this respect the text of the Curetonian and of the Sinai Palimpsest have a decided advantage over it, but of course the Palestinian must have been very nearly related to that spoken by Jesus." (Letter to the Editor.)

It is perhaps worth observing that the lemà of Matt. xxvii. 46 and the lamà of Mark xv. 34 is Palestinian; the Edessene, as represented in the Old Syriac and in the Peshiṭta being lemana.

villages of the Lebanon near to Damascus, such as Nebk, Ain et Tineh, and Ma'lula. Dr. Nöldeke has traced some of the most characteristic Palestinian forms—e.g. the use of yod instead of nun in forming the imperfect of verbs, and the nun epentheticon—in the speech of the inhabitants of these places,[1] from whom my sister and I received a very hearty welcome when we visited them in 1895. We are indebted to Dr. Dalman for the clear way in which he tells the story of how the dialect was carried northwards:

"After the war against Hadrian," he says, "Jewish scholarship, which was very poorly represented in 'Darom,' i.e. the ancient Philistia, wandered towards Lower Galilee, and occupied the districts of Uscha (now Chirbet Husche), Schephar Am (Schafa 'Amr), Sichnin (Suchnin), Zipporin (Ṣaffurije), Tiberias, and Cæsarea. The learning which was transferred from Judaea, in so far as it was Aramaic, clothed itself in the robe of the dialect spoken by the Jews of Galilee, which had been always distinguished from the Jewish both philologically and grammatically, although it has become known to us only by the product of a later period. This dialect is very nearly akin to the so-called Christian Palestinian dialect of the Evangeliarium Hierosolymitanum, whose exact origin is unknown to us."[2]

Most of the specimens of the Old or the New Testament in Palestinian Syriac which have yet been discovered appear to be portions of service-books. "But," as Mr. Gwilliam observes, "Lesson Books do not belong to the earliest periods of transcription. MSS. were marked for the Lessons long before separate copies were made for use in the Church. . . . Our oldest fragments appear to date from the eighth century at least. To that era belongs the commencement of the composition of Church Lesson Books. There is no proof that the Syro-Palestinian Lectionaries are translations from Greek Lectionaries; and it may be regarded as certain that they were preceded by complete copies of the Acts and the Pauline Epistles, and of parts, if not of the whole of the Old Testament."[3]

Dr. Nestle, however, considers that all the three codices which form the subject of the present volume are translations from Greek Lectionaries. "In one of the parallel passages of Codd. A and B, John xvii. 7," he says, "occurs the word ἔγνων, which in Greek allows of two meanings, and it is taken in Lesson XLII. (p. 53) in the meaning of ܝܕܥܬ 'I knew,' and in Lesson CL. (p. 190) in that of ܝܕܥܘ 'they knew.' This would not have been the case if the copyist had copied both passages from the same Syriac Gospel."

Dr. Nestle considers that Codex C cannot be a mere copy of B, for C has passages missing in B.

B cannot be a copy of C, its earlier date would preclude this; but there are too many variations betwixt them. B is sometimes more closely connected with A, sometimes with C.

[2] Grammatik des Jüdisch Palästinischen Aramäisch, p. 31.
[3] G. H. Gwilliam, Anecdota Oxoniensia, Semitic Series, vol. i., part v., p. xix.

Nevertheless, B and C are more closely related to each other than to A, for there is a very slight difference in the arrangement of their lessons.

These conclusions will be easily verified by means of the list of variations and peculiarities in the three codices which we give on pp. xix.—lxiv.

Latest Discoveries.

The materials available for forming a judgment on these questions have been doubled, even since the words we have quoted were written, without the problems which they present to us being any nearer to a solution. Besides the three MSS. which form the subject of the present volume, and the fragments published by Dr. Land and Dr. Harris, which we have already mentioned, we have now a leaf from Exodus, published by Mr. Gwilliam, and a leaf from Wisdom, transcribed by Mr. J. F. Stenning of Magdalene College, Oxford, both brought to the Bodleian Library from Egypt by Professor Sayce; also a fragment of 3 Kings, transcribed by Mr. Stenning from a very curious double palimpsest in the Convent library on Mount Sinai; a leaf of Job, discovered in the same place by Mr. F. C. Burkitt; and some twenty leaves containing a homily of St. John Chrysostom, found in the cover of an Arabic book by Mrs. Bensly. These have all been published in Anecdota Oxoniensia. Dr. Rendel Harris also, when at Sinai in 1893, discovered another leaf of Galatians, and two verses of a hymn in honour of SS. Peter and Paul.

In 1895 another Lectionary came into my own possession, containing many readings from the Old Testament—chiefly the Messianic prophecies,—from the Acts, and the Pauline Epistles. It contains 226 vellum leaves, measuring 15 cm. by 10. It was published in 1897 as Studia Sinaitica No. vi. Unfortunately, the last eight leaves are lost, so that I can assign no date to it, but it appears to be older than the "Liturgy of the Nile," now in the British Museum, of which specimens were given by G. Margoliouth in the Royal Asiatic Society's Journal for October 1896.

A few palimpsest leaves of Palestinian Syriac written over in Hebrew have been discovered by Dr. Schechter amongst the collection of fragments which he brought from the Genizah of Cairo to Cambridge in 1897. The text of these, so far as they have been read, is: Deut. xxxi. 3—8*a*, 12—14; Jeremiah xxix. 32—xxx. 10; xxxi. 8—15*a*; xxxi. 39—xxxii. 2; xxxii. 35—39; Hosea xiv. 3—9; Joel i. 1—6; ii. 10—20; 2 Corinthians iii. 2—iv. 9; 1 Thess. iii. 1—13; iv. 1—14. There are also an early Creed and a fragment of the life of S. Antony. It is worthy of remark that on the same page where the text of Hosea ends that of Joel begins, a space of nine lines being left between them, and that there is no trace of a rubric.

These leaves are therefore portions of a continuous version, like those published by Mr. Gwilliam, and they are probably derived from the same locality, though they do not form part of the same MS.

On my visits to Sinai in 1893 and 1895 I paid no attention to the rubrics of Codex C. It was not, therefore, possible to include the whole of them in this work; these I have given in the form of collations (or entire where the variations were too many), being copied either from the MS. itself, in 1897, or from photographs. Separate lists are therefore given of those rubrics in A and C which it has not been possible to place along with the text.

LIST OF VARIANTS IN THE THREE CODICES.

THE following notes are designed to show the chief variations betwixt the text of the three Palestinian Syriac Lectionaries of the Gospels and the text of Westcott and Hort. I have not included in it a few phrases which are merely introductory to some of the Lessons, nor any variations which do not affect the meaning, nor those that are due to the superfluity of pronouns in Syriac, as against their occasional suppression, when they might be present by implication, in Greek. Nor have I always noticed the presence or absence of ܕܝ or of καὶ εἶπεν αὐτῷ after ἀπεκρίθη, nor of ὁ κύριος before or instead of Ἰησοῦς, nor whether ἀμὴν occurs once or twice. To do so would have been to burden my pages without profit to anyone. In some instances I have considered that where forms like ܬܠܡܝܕܝ, ܥܒܕܝ, occur in B or C instead of ܬܠܡܝܕܘܝ, ܥܒܕܘܝ, as we find them in A, it is rather a case of contraction or of the ܘ being dropped, than a case of the possessive pronoun αὐτοῦ being omitted. Such instances will be found in Matt. xi. 1 on p. 77, Matt. xi. 2 on page 275, and Matt. xxi. 34 on page 152. In the numbering of verses I have kept strictly to that of De Lagarde's text, which is that of the Vulgate. I think this will lead to a greater facility of reference between his book and ours. In the rare cases where there is a discrepancy between his numbers and those of Westcott and Hort, I have given a second figure in brackets. When the number of a page is given in brackets it must be understood that the variant occurs on that page only.

For Codex A, I have kept strictly to the text of De Lagarde. This contains some instances where the prefix to the third person of the imperfect tense of the verb is the Edessene nun instead of the Palestinian yod. To take these words as if they were in the first person plural would be to do violence to the sense of the passages. Such instances will be found in Matt. i. 23, iii. 9; also in Matt. vi. 34, where Miniscalchi read a yod.

Some Peculiarities of the Syriac Text.

Matt.	ii. 6.	B has a superfluous ܡܢܟܝ ἔκ σου after the first Ἰούδα. It is evidently in anticipation of a word two lines below it, and may be compared with the ܘܐܬܚܙܝ of the Sinai palimpsest in Luke xxiv. 33.	256
	iv. 24.	It is curious to find ܕܠܘܥܡܡܝܢ ܠܘܥܡܡܝܢ in B and C for the ܕܠܘܥܡܡܝܢ ܠܘܥܡܡܝܢ of A. It is certainly a better rendering of the Greek.	61
	vi. 34.	B translates αὔριον by ܡܚܪ ܠܡܚܪ.	71
	vii. 11.	In Less. LIII. we have the curious phrase ܟܡܐ ܚܕ ܡܟܠܘܢ as a translation of πόσῳ μᾶλλον. In Less. CXXVI. it is rendered ܚܕ ܟܡܐ ܡܟܠܘܢ	64, 135

Matt.	x. 5.	A has ܒܥ̈ܬܗܘܢ ܠܒ ܗ̇ܘ where B and C have ܠܗܠܝܢ ܫܠܚ ܝܬܗܘܢ τούτους ἀπέστειλεν. ܒܥܬ may possibly be the Arabic بعث ἀπέστειλε, but ܠܒ must be a mistake.	245, 246
	x. 37.	ܒܪ ܐܐ ܒܪܐ in A and in C, p. 76, is evidently meant for υἱὸν ἢ θυγατέρα.	66, 76
	xvii. 25.	ܐܡܪܝܢ in B and C is evidently a mistake for ܐܡܪ ܐܝܢ.	82
	xxv. 4.	ܗܝܢ in A and C is probably a mistake for ܗܠܝܢ.	95
	xxviii. 8.	It is interesting to find the name ܚܩܠ ܐܕܡܐ, Aceldama.	199, 209
Mark	i. 9.	Here B shows us the cause of a frequent mistake in Pal. Syr. MSS. The letter ܦ is usually formed by writing a ܒ, and then drawing a vertical stroke through it. When the scribe has forgotten this stroke we have words like ܒܗܠܝܢ in place of ܦܗܠܝܢ. Another instance is in Matt. xiv. 15 (p. 79): ܒܕܒܪ = ܦܕܒܪ. Cf. p. xxv., Luke ix. 32.	79, 265
	vii. 35.	B has ܘܒܘܐ (εὐθὺς) at the beginning of the verse, where A and C have ܘܗܘܐ (καὶ ἦν).	142
	ix. 19.	B has ܘܡܪܝܚܬ instead of the ܘܡܪܢܚܬ (ἀφρίζων) of A and C.	143
	ix. 22.	C has ܕܐܕܐܢ where A and B have ܕܐܢ (εἰ).	143
	ix. 24.	C has ܐܟܐ where A and B have ܟܐܪ (for ἐπετίμησεν).	143
	xv. 46.	B and C both have ܡܢ ἀπὸ instead of the ܙܒܢ ἀγοράσας of A. Probably, in an older manuscript, the upper part of a ܙ was rubbed away, and the remainder with ܒ appeared to be a ܦ.	19, 207
Luke	ii. 22.	In A we have the original form of the Afel ܐܣܠܩܘ, and in B and C the contracted form ܐܣܩܘ. 23. C translates μήτραν by ܒܝܬ ܬܘܠܕܝܢ.	272
	ii. 36.	The ܡܒܝܬܐ of B is evidently a scribe's blunder for ܢܒܝܬܐ.	273
	vii. 14.	B and C translate τῆς σοροῦ by ܠܐܓܢܐ. We have probably the same word in the Sinai palimpsest of the Syriac Gospels, though only the initial ܐ and the final are legible. I read the final ܐ in 1897.	100
	vii. 25.	All three codices translate εἰσίν by ܝܗܒܝܢ, ܝܗܝܒܝܢ or ܡܗܒܝܢ (διδόασι). We may surmise that the word ܝܬܒܝܢ (καθίστανται) has lost the upper stroke of its ܬ, and has thus become ܝܗܒܝܢ. In both the Sinai MSS. ܬ appears like ܗ with the central stroke heightened. Cf. Studia Sinaitica No. vi., p. xxix., and this Lectionary at John viii. 2.	274
	viii. 6.	ܡܩܡ in A seems to be a mistake for ܘܩܡ.	104

Luke viii. 29. ܡܬܕܒܪ in B is evidently a mistake for ܡܬܕܒܪ. 10

ix. 32. B and C translate βεβαρημένοι by ܝܩܝܪܝܢ, A by ܝܩܪܝܢ. 241

x. 20. B and C have the Hebrew plural ܫܡܗܘܬܗܘܢ instead of ܫܡܗܬܗܘܢ̈. 233

John i. 16. ܚܠܦܗ in all three Codices is probably a mistake for ܚܠܦ. 3

iii. 8. B and C have ܢܦܫܐ where A has ܢܫܒܐ πνεῖ. 9

iii. 28. A translates αὐτοὶ by ܡܢܘܢ, B by ܡܢܝܢܘܢ, and C by ܡܢܝܘܢ. It is probably a corruption of ܡܢܗܘܢ, see John xii. 26, infra. 11

vi. 18. C has ܕܢܫܒܝܢ and B ܕܢܫܒܐ for ܕܢܫܒ (πνέοντος). 18

ix. 8. ܡܟܕܗܘܢ is a very curious word for προσαίτης, see Nöldeke, Z.D.M.G., vol. xxii., p. 464, on the change of the ה into ו. See also Schwally, Idioticon, p. 66, sub ܟܕܘ, and Goldzieher, Muhammedanische Studien, vol. ii., pp. 387-393. 44

x. 38. ܘܒ in B is evidently καὶ ἐν. 46

xii. 26. The curious word ܡܢܝܢ becomes, in the parallel passage on p. 167, ܦܢܝܢ in A and ܡܢܝܢ in B and C. 48

xv. 20, xvi. 4. Possibly ܚܕܘܡ may be a contraction of ܚܕܗܘܡ on p. 54: B and C have ܚܕܝܡ, C also on p. 24. For the change of the second radical ܗ into yod in such words, see Nöldeke in the Z.D.M.G., vol. xxii., p. 464. 24, 84, 156, 157

xx. 17. Either Hebrew or Arabic influence is shown in the plural suffixes to ܘܐܒܘܟܘܡ and ܘܐܠܗܟܘܡ καὶ πατέρα ὑμῶν, καὶ Θεὸν ὑμῶν in C. 123

xxi. 4. B and C translate ⌜εἰς⌝ τὸν αἰγιαλόν ܠܟܐܦܐ, whilst A has the more idiomatic ܥܠ ܐܝܕ ܝܡܐ (ἐπὶ τὴν χεῖρα τῆς θαλάσσης). 125

Variations in the Three Codices.

Matt. i. 3, 5. All om. τῆς. 6. All add γυναικὸς after τῆς. 11. All add δὲ ἐγέννησε τὸν Ἰωακεὶμ, Ἰωακεὶμ after Ἰωσείας, thus adding another generation. 252

i. 20. All agree with the Sinai palimpsest and Cureton in having ἐξ αὐτῆς instead of ἐν αὐτῇ: the Peshitta has ἐν αὐτῇ. 21. A has καλέσεις, or καλέσει, B has καλεσόμενος, and C καλέσεται. 22. All add Ἡσαίου after διὰ: C om. λέγοντος. 25. A and C om. [οὗ]:

	A adds αὐτῆς τὸν πρωτότοκον after υἱόν: B and C have ܘܩܪܐ "and he called," whilst A has ܘܩܪܬ "and she called," for καὶ ἐκάλεσεν.	253
Matt. ii. 4.	C has συναγαγόντες for συναγαγὼν.	255
ii. 6.	B om. λεὲμ, and has ἐκ σοῦ after the word Ἰούδα, occurring twice, the first time being evidently a lapsus calami: B om. οὐδαμῶς and γὰρ: B om. μου after λαόν: C has αὐτοῦ for μου. 7. A adds αὐτοῖς after φαινομένου. 8. All add ἰδοὺ after εἶπεν: all add ἐλθόντες after εὕρητε. 9. C om. ἐστάθη. 12. B adds ἀλλὰ before δι' ἄλλης ὁδοῦ.	256

Mark iii. 5.	συνλυπούμενος is expressed by two Syriac words: all add τὴν χεῖρα αὐτοῦ after ἐξέτεινεν, they omit it after ἀπεκατεστάθη and add ὡς ἡ ἄλλη.	137
v. 24.	After πολὺς all add καὶ συνελθόντος αὐτοῦ ἰδοὺ ὄχλος πολύς: C om. ἰδού. 26. All add ἐκεῖθεν after χεῖρον. 29. B om. αὐτῆς. 30. All add ἔβλεψεν after ἐπιστραφεὶς. 32. All om. περὶ . . . 33. C om. ὃ γέγονεν.	248
v. 34.	All have ὁ κύριος Ἰησοῦς instead of ὁ δὲ: C om. ὕπαγε εἰς εἰρήνην.	249
vi. 1.	All have εἰς τὴν πόλιν for εἰς τὴν πατρίδα αὐτοῦ. 2. All add οὕτως after τοιαῦται. 3. All om. ὁ τέκτων: all om. οὐκ before εἰσὶν. 4. B adds ἰδοὺ before ἔλεγεν: all have πόλει for πατρίδι: C om. καὶ ἐν τῇ οἰκίᾳ αὐτοῦ.	258
vi. 14.	B has something unintelligible for φανερὸν: all have τοῦ κυρίου Ἰησοῦ for αὐτοῦ: A adds ὃν ἐγὼ ἀπεκεφάλισα after βαπτίζων. 15. All add ἢ before ὡς.	293
vi. 17.	B has ἔβαλεν for ἔδησεν. 20. All have ἐποίησε for ἠπόρει. 22. All om. αὐτοῦ. 23. All om. καὶ ὤμοσεν αὐτῇ ⌜Ὅτι⌝ ⌜ἐάν με⌝ αἰτήσῃς δώσω σοι. 26. All add ὁ κύριος Ἰησοῦς after ἐξελθὼν. 34. The explanation ὅ ἐστιν Διανοίχθητι, which is omitted in the earlier A, appears in the later B and C. It is quite unnecessary in a Syriac version, and one wonders if it is a replacement of what occurred in an earlier MS., or was added through the misplaced zeal for accuracy of a later reviser. 35. All add τότε before ἠνοίγησαν and εὐθὺς before ἐλύθη: B adds εὐθὺς before ἐλάλει.	141
vii. 37.	A has an interpolation καὶ ὅσα αὐτὸς πεποίηκεν after Καλῶς πάντα πεποίηκεν.	142
viii. 29.	All three codices add ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ Θεοῦ, and C further adds τοῦ ζῶντος. 31. B om. ἀναστῆναι.	143, 144
viii. 34.	τὸν σταυρὸν αὐτοῦ in A is added by a later hand. 35. All om. γὰρ: A om. ἐμοῦ after ἕνεκεν: all repeat ἕνεκεν before τοῦ
